

Bank accounts

In order to have your salary paid or transfer your rent, it is often necessary to set up a German bank account.

It is possible to open an account at a local branch bank or with an online bank. A branch bank offers the advantage of having a local contact person, but can be associated with higher costs and sometimes with a longer processing time. Setting up an account with an online bank is relatively quick and easy. Online banks

* There is one small problem with the comdirect application form. You are asked whether you have lived at your current postal (registered) address for more than two years. If you say no, you have to enter your previous address (e.g. in India). Unfortunately, the form only allows you to proceed if you enter a postcode that has five digits (which is not necessarily the case with foreign postcodes).

The solution is to enter 12345 or Leipzig's postcode (04109) and then you can continue to fill out the form. On the printout, simply cross out 12345 (or 04109) and fill in the actual international postcode of your previous address! Alternatively, you can enter the German address you entered above here again and then correct it on the printout and write: Zuzug aus dem Ausland (Moved here from abroad).

Always print out the application form and sign the original!

Branch banks

There are also a number of branch banks in the city centre. The advantage is that your IBAN can usually be communicated directly and you do not have to wait for a letter. However, you should not make a bank transfer if the credit and document checks have not yet been completed. For the initial 12 months and under certain conditions, Deutsche Bank offers free Partnership Banking for employees of Leipzig University.

Note: Depositing money in a German bank account can be quite expensive. If you only need the bank account in order to transfer your rent to the guest house of Leipzig University, you can also deposit money at the Bundesbank Leipzig at Karl-Liebknecht-Straße 141 A, 04275 Leipzig. You can pay money into a Bundesbank account from 9 am to 1 pm on Monday to Friday for only three euros.
